ETHAN SHOSHAN
I'M ALWAYS THINKING OF YOU EVEN WHEN I'M KISSING ANOTHER BOY
2 SEPTEMBER . 12- 8PM

September 2, 2009, Ethan Shoshan, will display a collection of over 100 relics in an exhibition titled 'I'm always thinking of you even when I'm kissing another boy'. This salon-style installation and performance gathers found objects and re-tells their unique histories. The show will take place at Envoy Enterprises, 131 Chrystie St, NYC from 12pm – 8pm with a reception for the artist at 6pm.

Shoshan is a New York City artist and queer activist who incorporates personal histories as an integral part of his work. In 'I'm always thinking of you even when I'm kissing another boy,' he brings back a tradition of storytelling, seamlessly connecting the audience to a deeply personal experience outside of everyday experiences with popular media, film and television. Each objects' narrative speaks to the universality of struggle and desire while acknowledging the individual in both subtle and conscious manners that sustains community and culture.

This exhibition features a selection of ephemera, art and gifts – each inspiring a moment of authenticity and emotion. As its architect, Shoshan will remain present throughout the exhibition, inviting viewers to learn the history of works in the show and share parallel experiences and situations.
